'Walto' syndrome

'We are like that only' is often said or heard. It is an assertion of something that discounts the potential. This is reflected in a series of acts of commission and omission being committed by authorities and tolerated by people. Both seem to have withdrawn within the shell of cynicism and belief that 'nothing can be done' or 'nothing can happen'. In other words, no change is possible and the show shall go on with its clumsiness and resignations.

We blame weather for closed faucets and water logging; justify the jams on increasing number of vehicles; find fault with people's behavior in case of indiscipline on the roads. For every failure, there is a scapegoat. Delays are condoned, price escalation in projects is accepted as a matter of fact; extravagance in public spending is overlooked; waste is not frowned at; none is held accountable for damage, especially of food grains.

And there is no rationale in not doing the desirable. For twenty three years, the Benami Transactions (Prohibition) Act could not be notified, and there is no explanation. One is at a loss to know why candidates facing trials in heinous offences and behind bars are not debarred from contesting elections, despite the repeated recommendations of the Election Commission; why coalition governments should feel helpless to check the wrong doing; why Lokpal Bill is embroiled in controversies; why Lokayuktas are not in position in all states and why those in position are helpless in taking suitable action; why single directive was brought back through legislation in the Central Vigilance Commission Act and double protection provided to senior public officials; why CVC's writ does not run in the states; why states should not have a prototype of vigilance act on the pattern of the CVC; why roads cannot be repaired as soon as these are damaged; why explanations of helplessness accepted; why pavements on which none walks are replaced frequently; why space meant for people to walk is not available for the purpose; why garbage is not lifted on time and permitted to rot; why, why??

There are many whys one shudders to mention. But it is only by seeking an answer to 'whys' that we can expect any action. It has to be sought assertively and repeatedly. Why not drop 'only' and see the difference? 'We are like that' that works, take things seriously, accept what is good, change for the better, not hesitate to point out faults and accept responsibility for our failings and rectify, not worry about nefarious alliances that compel one not be oneself and compromise with principles or postpone action that has to be urgent. Pusillanimit, thy name is weakness.

The object is to have an evaluation of the functioning of the tool by an independent agency.

Dr SB Pandey, US Pandey and Ashutosh Mishra made presentation on IP to Chairman Bihar State Electricity Board and the State Electricity Regulatory Authority on 21 April. The officials seemed to be convinced of the utility of the pact. Efforts shall be made to pursue the organizations to adopt the pact.

Project Pahal

Grounding of Pahal in Bihar: The 'Committees of Concerned Eminent Citizens' have been formed in Madhubani and Darbhanga districts to support TII activities locally. Fair Election Campaign took place to motivate voters to vote during Bihar Panchayat Elections for responsive, qualified candidates in 30 Gram Panchayats of these districts. Ten Model Gram Panchayats have been identified and to make the dream of good governance a reality in these areas. More than 200 RTI applications and citizens' complaints have been taken up to improve service delivery and to make government official accountable.

Pahal in Chhattisgarh : The work done under this programme in TII's Model Gram Panchayat, Mochh in Bilaspur district of Chhattisgarh was awarded the Best RTI Success Story by the Madhya Pradesh Academy of Administration & Management, Bhopal in March, 2011. A delegation from Jharkhand consisting of State Information Commissioner Mrs. Gangotri Kujur and 15 newly elected Panchayat leaders visited this Gram Panchayat in April, 2011.

Development Pact (DP)

DP is being implemented in 14 panchayats of Chhattisgarh where political representatives have signed their development agenda. Committees have been constituted in ten panchayats to monitor and review performance. The process of implementation of DP in Jhupelaw panchayat (Pali, Rajasthan) is in progress.

Right to Service Acts

TII had been following suggestion to the Department of Administrative Reforms & Public Grievances for reviewing the citizens' charters in consultation with the stakeholders. It had also pursued the issue with the states. As a result, the government of Madhya Pradesh has enacted Public Service Guarantee Act, 2010. This was followed by Bihar Right to Service Act. Similarly, states of Uttar Pradesh, Jammu & Kashmir, Goa, Punjab and Haryana too have followed in framing this law. It is now mandatory for public officials to provide service within the stipulated period, failing which the penalty can be imposed upon the concerned official.

The Government of Delhi too has cleared its Right of Citizen to Time Bound Delivery of Services Act, 2011, to bring 40 services for ensuring timely delivery of services. The governments of Rajasthan, Jharkhand, Tamil Nadu and Union Territory of Chandigarh have initiated the process for such an enactment.

Board of Management Meeting

issues raised by various members were clarified. Thereafter, the BoM discussed various issues like campaigning for an effective Lokpal, State Chapters' activities, financial statement, and approval of Membership applications.

Advocacy & Legal Advise Centre

Freedom From Corruption Summit

TI India and 5th Pillar organized a two day 'Freedom from Corruption Summit' on April 27-28 at India Habitat Centre, New Delhi. One of the speakers was a young, educated, and articulate lady Sarpach Chhave Rajawat from Rajasthan who, despite being highly educated, chose to join politics at the grass roots level. This appears to be a positive step when educated young persons start taking interest in the governance at the local level.

Discussion centered around the issues of black money and corruption in general. All the speakers echoed the importance of CSOs and NGOs in one voice in keeping the nation vigilant about the ill effects of corruption. They also said that anti-corruption organisations have an important role to play in empowering citizens in demanding accountability from their elected leaders, administrators and media.

Right to Information Act

Rajasthan Chapter organized a symposium on the use of RTI Act for fighting corruption, nepotism, misconduct and dishonesty in public institutions. Retired Chief Justice of Sikkim High Court released leaflets, brochures and booklets explaining the salient features of the RTI Act and methods to invoke law for seeking information. The Chapter is in close association with the Anti-Corruption Bureau for bringing about transparency in functioning of public officials.

The Odisha Chapter organized a one-day Workshop on RTI Day on the theme of 'Right to Information – Opportunities and Challenges' on June 15 in collaboration with Concern Worldwide and WOSCA, Keonjhar.
